Editorial

On behalf of the Board of VejoVis - The International Medical Association of United Kingdom, I am delighted to announce the publication of the inaugural issue of the VejoVis Journal.

Our Association is the publisher of VejoVis Journal of online open access online journal in areas of Medicine. The articles and books published by VejoVis will have instant and free online access. Backed by an experienced core group, VejoVis envisions providing speedy and quality publications to expand the horizon of knowledge and a platform for sharing the knowledge.

VejoVis Journal is in the process of developing an electronic manuscript handling system for the journals and eBooks to help the authors and reviewers a platform that will be easy to use and cost effective, that will also eliminate the need to use the costly postal system and will considerably reduce the manuscript handling time. Each journal or book will have its own unique web page designed exclusively for that purpose. The content of the books will be in a fully searchable format by a key word or a phrase.

Welcomes articles in the field of clinical and laboratory investigations relevant to the field of Medicine, Medical practice and teaching and its allied subjects such as clinical trials, multimodality treatment, surgery, critical care, biomarkers, prevention, pathology, radiology, biochemistry, interventions and molecular biology. Emphasis is placed on original research articles, technical innovations and timely and systematic reviews. The journal may also published clinical case reports if they deal with unreported, unusual diseases or association of diseases, or new findings on pathogenesis and treatment of the disease relevant to Medical research.

Our Association guarantee a combination of approaches, ideas and techniques that will help you manage your own learning and growth. Support all our members to looking for career progression, career guidance, looking to migrate to UK or any other overseas country as a health professional.

The object(s) of the Association are as follows:

- 1) to promote the medical and allied sciences, to maintain the honor and interests of the medical profession and to promote the achievement of high quality health care;
- 2) to hold or arrange for the holding of periodical meetings of the members of the Association and of the medical profession generally;
- 3) to circulate such information as may be thought desirable by means of a periodical journal, which shall be the journal of the Association, and by the occasional publication of transactions or other papers;
- 4) to facilitate access to resources and help promoting the medical and allied sciences in such manner as may from time to time be determined;

5) to do all such other lawful things as may be incidental or conducive to the promotion or carrying out of the foregoing objects or any of them.

As Medical Research is a multidisciplinary VejoVis Journal aims to provide a common platform to all researchers working in clinical or laboratory research and instrumentation around the globe to share the advances in their respective and related fields. The journal will provide for physicians, biologist, nurses, and other health care personnel's involved with the medical research with latest updates, research and reviews.

I also thank the co-editors and authors of this first issue who admirably and with good humour suffered through our teething process as we put in place our workflows while at the same time going into production.
